

Animate! TV

12midnight, Channel 4

Six new films showcase the variety of form and technique used in modern animation, as well as the sheer imagination of the artists. Flat Earth is based on maps and information appropriated from the internet to create mini-narratives around the globe, while Magnetic Movie is a startling representation of invisible gravitational fields. David Alexander Anderson animates the words of Persian poet Hafez, but it's Mark Simon Hewis' The Life Size Zoetrope that is the most ambitious in execution — he uses riders on a fairground ride to animate the story of a man's life. MS
